

Jeremy Fackenthal is currently the Managing Director of the Institute for Ecological Civilization. He earned a MDiv at Christian Theological Seminary and a PhD in Philosophy of Religion and Theology at Claremont Graduate University, continues to do documentary film work, and writes on critical theory and process thought. Jeremy has been active in American Baptist Churches since his youth and has worked with ABC organizations on conferences and events over the past several years. In addition to nonprofit work, he also runs a small production company working on film and video projects and live events.

